

This should be a non-issue. More competition is good for the consumer/public and it pushes industry to continue to improve upon their products and services. It's the American way. The government (and FCC) should not stand in the way of the free market. I see no way that having satellite radio services that overlap or duplicate that of AM/FM broadcasters could be materially harmful, other than creating more competition in the marketplace.